LOVE ANO HATE OF CIVILIZED LIFE, and all their moticy train of consequences, as well as the all vividly painted by the masterly pen of one who has seen and suffered what he writes.

The Red Man is rupidly passing away from his nutive soil, and "the places that here him, know him no longer." His bow is broken—his tomahawk is buried, and ere another century shall have ewept by, he will be a myth of the past—a reminiscence of story.

have ewept by, he will be a myinter the personnel story.

But in the pages of such works as

THAYENDANEGEA, THE SCOURGE, he will live forever, and those who, a hundred years hence, shall laugh and weep over that wondroes tale, will know and feel all the nobility—all the dignity—all the hardiness—all the untamable grandeur—sye, and all the involvente, fate-like vengefuness of the TRUE NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN!
So truthfully and conscientiously has NED BUNTLINE performed this, the crowning task of his life—the work upon which he is content to let his xaw rest.
